PICTURE OF THE WEEK!

UNDULATED MORAY ( “puhi-lau-milo” ) - Narrow jaws full of long, sharp teeth including a row down the center of it’s mouth; the top of it’s head is sometimes yellow or green; the body color varies from brown to white with net-like striped markings; often seen posed in the open with his mouth agape. This is perhaps the most common Indo-Pacific moray and one of the nastiest. Often confused with the Yellowhead Moray but it’s markings are not fully banded. Do not attempt to get anywhere near this guy. Grows to 3.5 feet.

DATE OF REPORTING: AUGUST 22, 2011
