PICTURE OF THE WEEK!

A large PELAGIC MANTA RAY was spotted several days this week cruising between Molokini and Makena. The “Kai Kanani” was beach loading on Wednesday morning and the passengers watched him jump out of the water several times. There is lots of krill in the water (hairy wormy things that look like a catapillar). He was probably swooping them up for breakfast. We are comparing his markings to the mantas in our log to see if he is a frequent visitor to our waters or a newcomer.

DATE OF REPORTING: APRIL 24, 2011

AIR TEMPERATURE: 86 degrees

WATER TEMPERATURE: 76.5 degrees at 60'

VIZIBILITY: 60' @ 60' and improving.....

STAFF COMMENTS: “ A southwest swell earlier in the week left us with some surf in the swim zone and milky water. Friday and Saturday conditions were much improved and almost back to normal by Easter morning! We are so spoiled with our viz down here that usually ranges between 80-100' or more! The upcoming week should be epic! “
